Parvaneh Khosravizadeh

Abstract:

It seems what nowadays has been appreciated as the prominent emerged theories of linguistic science and has gained the general and universal acceptance bears some resemblance to the first human philosophical approaches – the history of which comes back to the first millennium B.C.

Though hidden to nobody is the impact of the ancient Greek philosophy on the twentieth century linguistic ideas, the only thing that can be accounted as the primary goal of this paper is a research into the other viewpoints existing simultaneously in the realm of ancient civilizations.
